Blessed Among Us Maura O'Halloran Christian Zen Monk (1955-1982)

Born in Boston and raised in Ireland in a large Catholic family, Maura O'Halloran graduated from Trinity College, Dublin. From a young age, she displayed a deep compassion for human suffering. After college she worked in soup kitchens and traveled widely in Latin America. Her concern for social justice was accompanied by a serious attraction to the spiritual life. After experimenting with various methods of prayer, she decided to explore the wisdom of the east.

IN 1979 she flew to Japan and applied for admission to a Zen Buddhist monastery in Tokyo. Her journals record her experience--sustained periods of meditation, manual labor, and an ascetic discipline of mind and body. After six months she experienced an ecstatic breakthrough, which her Master recognized as enlightenment. So impressed was he by her progress that he made an extraordinary offer—to entrust his monastery to her. But Maura did not believe this was her vocation. "I'm twenty-six and I feel as if I've lived my life," she wrote. "Strange sensation, almost as if I'm close to death...I'm totally content. Of course I want to get deeper, see clearer...If I have another fifty or sixty years (who knows?) of time, I want to live it for other people."

After leaving the monastery she was killed in a bus accident on October 22, 1982. Today a small statue of her in the monastery in Japan is revered by many pilgrims, both Christians and Buddhists.

"Suddenly I understand that we must take care of things just because they exist." —Maura O'Halloran

Dear Padre

Are priests and religious the same?

The pastor of my parish recently asked us to pray for “priests and religious.” Aren’t they the same thing?

Some priests are religious, but not all religious are priests. As used here, the term “religious” refers to a member of a religious order—a man or woman who has professed vows of poverty, chastity, and obedience and who follows an approved rule of their religious congregation. Redemptorists, Sisters of Mercy, Franciscans, Jesuits, and Benedictines would all be examples. Members of a religious order can be sisters or brothers, but some religious men are priests as well.

We call these religious men “Father.” A priest who is not a religious is attached to a diocese and promises obedience to his bishop. He would be celibate but would not have a vow of poverty, so he would receive a salary and could own his own house or car.

Behind your question is an important point. All priests are called to be “religious,” holy men (in the spiritual sense) who bring us closer to Jesus by the celebration of sacraments, leadership, preaching, and the lives they live. In fact, all of the baptized are called to be holy; religious profession and priestly ordination are just two ways that Catholics live out their baptismal calling. The most common vocation is marriage, a sacrament alongside holy orders.
